Rainfall Over Year's Normal

With this total surpassed all ready by 2.04 inches, it is apparent that unless the Spring months bring less rain than usually recorded during April, May and June, we have reason to expect that the precipitation total for this year will approximate fifty inches.

This would be equal to the total rainfall recorded in 1936 (50.72) and for which there is no other comparable figure as far back as 1911 when the total was 55.31. The years 1907 and 1906 brought us fifty or more inches of rain, as did 1897, 1896, and 1895.

Our records show that "it really rained" in the years 1893, 1890 and 1877, however. The totals for these years in the order named above are 63.54 inches,
